The NFL regular season begins this Thursday night, and online bookmaker Sportsbook.com has posted their odds for all eight divisions. NFL division winner odds at Sportsbook.com for the AFC South shape up in the following order: Indianapolis Colts -150, Jacksonville Jaguars +150, Tennessee Titans +800, and the Houston Texans +1000.

Favorite: The Indianapolis Colts, to no one's surprise, are receiving the least favorable odds to win the South (meaning they are again the favorite). The Colts have dominated this division for years and they have the personnel to finish in first again this season. There are some injury concerns with Peyton Manning, but he is supposed to be ready to roll for game one.

Runner up: The Jacksonville Jaguars are definitely the Colts biggest challenger in 2008, just as they have been the past couple of seasons. Many feel the Jags have what it takes to overtake Indianapolis this season, but that coming to pass depends greatly on the play of quarterback David Garrard. He must duplicate last year's effort and then some for the Jaguars to usurp the Colts.

Sportsbook.com AFC South regular season wins odds:

Indianapolis Colts - Over 11 (-105)

Jacksonville Jaguars - Over 10 (-130)

Tennessee Titans - Over 8 (Even)

Houston Texans - Over 7.5 (-155)
