Arkansas vs Mississippi College Football Odds, College Football Picks & College Football Predictions: Offense meets defense this weekend as SEC West rivals Arkansas and Mississippi lock horns at Vaught-Hemingway Stadium in Oxford. The Razorbacks will attempt to extract themselves from the West cellar with a win over the fourth place Rebels when the action gets underway at 12:21pm ET tomorrow (ESPN360.com). College Football Odds at BetUS.com have the Rebels listed as a -6.5 against the spread home favorite.

Arkansas suffered a heart-breaking 20-23 loss last weekend against the Gators at the Swamp. The Razorbacks did not exactly burn up the turf, but they did take advantage of four Florida turnovers in route to 357 total yards. Quarterback Ryan Mallet completed 12-of-27 passes for 224 yards and a touchdown. He connected with sophomore wide receiver Greg Childs four times for 135 yards and one score. Running back Dennis Johnson carried the ball 14 times for 107 yards (7.6 yards per carry).

The Hogs offense currently ranks 18th in the nation, putting up an average of 34.5 points and 436 yards per game. This weekend they face a Rebels defense that is allowing 300.2 yards per game, a total which has them ranked 23rd in the country. However, despite Mississippi's formidable defense, it is not the equivalent of Alabama's or Florida's, both of which Arkansas has already faced.

The Rebels improved to 4-2 last Saturday, beating non-conference foe UAB 48-13 in Oxford. Mississippi had its best offensive outing of the year, posting 22 first downs and 501 yards in the decisive win over the Blazers. Quarterback Jevan Snead, who has thrown 12 touchdowns to nine interceptions this season, completed 15-of-22 passes for 240 yards and three touchdowns. Snead hit wideout Shay Hodge seven times for 99 yards.

The aforementioned Rebels defense gave up 18 first downs and 351 yards to UAB's offense. The Blazers moved the ball effectively on the ground against Ole' Miss, racking up 230 rush yards at 5.8 yards per clip.

The Rebels got the win against Arkansas last year as Houston Nutt returned to Fayetteville to snag a 23-21 victory against his old team. However, the Razorbacks covered the spread as they have done in seven of their last eight meetings against Mississippi.

College Football Odds Betting Trend: Ole Miss is 3-7 against the spread in their last 10 games as a home favorite with a spread between 4 and 7.5.
