

Texas vs. Oklahoma State College Football Picks

Contributed by Reno Gold
Saturday, 31 October 2009
Last Updated Saturday, 31 October 2009

Texas vs. Oklahoma State College Football Picks: The No. 4 Texas Longhorns will travel to Stillwater, Oklahoma on Saturday (Oct. 31) to take on the No. 13 Oklahoma State Cowboys in a pivotal BIG 12 South battle at Boone Pickens Stadium. This game will be televised by ESPN2 with an 8 pm ET kickoff.

College football picks oddsmakers at Bodog.com currently have the Longhorns listed as 9½-point favorites versus the Cowboys, while the game's total is sitting at 54. Cowboys backers are getting +290 moneyline odds as a home underdog. Texas is giving -380 moneyline odds.

This game could be the most important game remaining in the BIG 12 South schedule now that the 2009 season is drawing into its latter stages. Already with a win over Oklahoma in their pockets, the Longhorns must past the test against the Pokes, a game where some pundits are calling for an upset. OSU backers see this game as an opportunity to pick up a signature win and jump back into the BCS picture.

Colt McCoy threw three touchdown passes and Texas crushed Missouri 41-7 last time out. Texas covered the 13.5-point spread, while the 48 points went UNDER the posted total of 51. McCoy completed 26-of-31 for 268 yards passing for Texas, and Jordan Shipley had two TD catches in the win.

Zac Robinson completed 23 of 27 passes for 250 yards with three touchdowns and Oklahoma State stretched their winning streak to five games with a 34-7 victory over Baylor in Week 8. The Cowboys covered the 8-point spread, while the final score played UNDER the day's posted total of 52.

College football picks: Take OSU and the 9 1/2 points.

Bet on sports at online sportsbook Bodog.com and receive a 10% Deposit Bonus and start winning today.